FRIDAY, MARCH 6, 1860.

The Cotton Factory.

It is a matter of encouragement to see that the people of Orangeburg have taken the initiatory steps in the matter of a cotton factory. A considerable amount in money and cotton was subscribed at the last meeting of the Agricultural Society for the purpose, and the following Committee appointed to carry the enterprise out:

Harbin Biggs, T. H. Zimmerman, W. P. Hadley, James Stokes, W. A. Mackey, Dr. J. C. Holman, Hon. M. J. Koller, Julia Robinson, W. W. Cutler and W. T. Muller.

It is likely that the next step will be the calling of a meeting of the people to consummate arrangements. At this meeting every citizen, outside of his own pecuniary interest, who cares for the welfare of Orangeburg, ought to be present. We especially expect the men who control the capital of Orangeburg to come out. It is don't do to say that the people of Orangeburg are too poor. This is the way to make them rich. Besides, in the days of our greatest poverty, during Radical ascendancy, the people of Orangeburg had $80,000 deposited in the Savings Bank. Now it is evident that we are worth three times as much at this time. If we laid aside $80,000 then, we can easily lay aside $250,000 now. How easy then will it be for us to invest $25,000 in a cotton factory which is certain to pay from 20 to 30 per cent on the investment.

We expect all to co-operate in this enterprise.

There is no surer way of building up the South than by factories. As soon as they are scattered over the land the South will begin to blossom with prosperity. This is no idle boast, but the experience of every country that has added manufactures to agriculture. Every consideration of interest and patriotism should infuse life into this enterprise.

A Blunder and a Wrong.

We heartily endorse the editorial of the Augusta Chronicle and Constitutionalist in another column headed "A Mistake." We think the Democratic party made an egregious blunder in being decoyed by Republicans into killing Mr. Tilden. The greatest wrong ever perpetrated in a so-called free government was the fraudulent seating of Mr. Hayes in the Presidential chair, and had this been kept before the people, and the victim of it been upheld, the Republican party would have received its severest blow. There would have been no better issue on which to enter into the coming campaign, with the same ticket, than the "free state."

It should have been the key note of the campaign. We have foolishly burnt the bridge which carried us safely across the stream. Tilden was the first Democrat elected President since James Buchanan, and yet we have falsely accused him. That he did not take his seat, was no fault of his, but of the Democratic Senators who consented to the impudent "Electoral Commission."

The Lynching.

Lynch law is always dangerous, and when it is two indiscriminately appointed lead to great wrongs. But there are crimes which seem to be so heinous to await the slow process of the Courts, with the chances of escape through a false sense of pity, or through the technicalities at which lawyers leap. The gratification of brutal lust upon innocent victims comes under this class, and as such the action of the citizens of Georges Station in their summary dealing with the villain Kinder will not be condemned. The perpetrators of such deeds must be taught that they cannot commit them with safety.

The National Democratic Convention meets at Cincinnati in June.

Can Bayard Win?

The Two-thirds Rule.

We feel very hesitating in saying that the speech made by Mr. Bayard during that was in 1861, advocating peace, and expressing a belief in the practicality of two co-equal Confederacies living side by side in perfect harmony, and favoring an immediate recognition of the Southern Confederacy, will be fatally damaging to his availability as a presidential candidate.

It will be remembered that in 1861 Gen. George B. McClellan was put up as the peace candidate in opposition to Abraham Lincoln, and although the horrors of a war, the results of which were yet doubtful, were grievously opposing the masses, and the desire for peace was strong and general, McClellan was badly beaten.

Now that the war party has won, and there is no motive of self-interest to influence, as in '61, it is likely that a candidate who favored the losing side, and who was willing that the Union should be dissolved, will carry a Northern State?

Look at the matter calmly and practically, in view of the sectional spirit of the North which will never die out, and the efforts which will be made by the bloody-shirt stalwarts to intensify dissectionalism for partisan purposes, we do not think that a candidate who espoused this unpopular cause will stand a chance.

We hope that the South will be made to do what we do, to support a candidate who favored the losing side, and who was willing that the Union should be dissolved, will carry a Northern State?

Mr. Bayard is the Democratic candidate, Blaine and the rest of the stalwarts would want no better text for the Northern ear than the little paragraph from Mr. Bayard's Dover speech: "Why, then may not two American Confederacies exist side by side without conflict?" This will be construed as championing the cause of the Southern Confederacy, and the author will be put in the same category with Jefferson Davis.

We honor Mr. Bayard, and would delight to see him above all others in the Presidential chair. We honor him for his honesty, his consistency and his independence. His Dover speech is entirely in harmony with his humanity and his nobility of character. We endorse every word he utters in it, and we respect him the more for his manliness, in brave standing up with a hopeless minority, and expressing his honest convictions. But the practical question is, can Mr. Bayard beget a President?

If a man wants the South to elect a President alone, Two or three Northern States are wanted. The man who can carry these States is the man for the Democrats to nominate.

We have often said that the South ought to have very little to do with Presidential-making. Leave this to the North, and it will be better for us. The greed of the masters of the South is far more important to them than the elevation of favorites to office.

The Democratic nominee should be as little hampered as possible with the idea of sectionallism, and in order that it may be destroyed, it should be best for the South to little talking, bold stalwart voting. We have very little choice at the particular candidate for President. All we want is the success of the Democrats.

Aiken for Governor.

We see the name of D. Wyatt Aiken suggested in some of our exchanges for Governor, and we must say that we like the nomination. We like it because he is a practical farmer and is identified with the best interest of the people. We like it because he is a practical and energetic man. Whatever he undertakes he does thoroughly. As Congress man he has been assiduous in his duties, devoting himself unreservedly and untiringly to the interest of his constituents, as his record shows. If his record as a granger is also another evidence of his working character it is safe to say that his zeal in this cause knows no bounds. We like him also because he thinks for himself and does not wait to take snuff until other people sneeze. He is a man of solidity and intelligence, and we believe would make a Governor for the people.

W. P. Kellogg is blackmailing Senator Hill for trying to unseat him. He has sued Mr. Hill for seducing Jessie Raymond, of Atlanta, in 1877. The political calendar is commenting to boil in Columbia. The Mayor's election is about to come off there, and the politicians are marshaling their forces,

Ever since 1855 the rule has been observed to make the rate of two-thirds of the delegates present in a Democratic Convention necessary for the choice of a nominating for President. It is now proposed by the National Democratic Executive Committee to change this rule so that half the delegates may be freed from, and thus from influences, a regular ordinary candidate run in. The small fry it is said depend on this. We think however that the majority rule is open to a greater danger. Under its workings a hasty and precipitate nomination may be made.

We rather prefer the time-honored custom. If it is more tiresome it is less precipitate and gives ample room for consultation and conciliation, if necessary. The idea that the majority rule would give the South more power, and enable her to dictate the candidate, we think, has little weight, because we think that, even if the South had this power, she ought not to use it. Such delegation would give the candidate a sectional character, which would weaken him materially.

The Hope of the South.

The hope of the South consists in the building up of its material interests. As long as we devote ourselves altogether to agriculture it will be poor. We must combine manufacture with agriculture if we wish to prosper. To make our cottons for clothing and wares is suicidal. We must cut up our factories, and railroads and immigrants will be sure to follow. We have a better soil and a better climate than the North, and why are we not as prosperous? It is because all our money goes there to buy manufactured articles? When we realize this truth the South will commence to grow and get as rich and prosperous as any section of the Union.

The holiness meetings, which have been going on for some time in Charleston, came to an end on Tuesday night by the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Inskip for Savannah. It is said that they created quite an interest in the city, reminding one of the Methodism of old times. From the published report of one of the sermons in the News and Courier, it would seem that Mr. Inskip works upon the hearts than the minds of his hearers and succeeds in exciting the deepest feelings. Mrs. Inskip labors with her husband in singing, conversing and even in lecturing. Hundreds have professed conversion, and we trust that permanent good has been done.

Col. E. G. Stockton, a distinguished officer who served before the war in the S. C. army, and resigned to accept a position in the C. S. army, committed suicide at Chicago on Tuesday by taking morphine. He left a note saying: "I die because I have got no home to go to." Poverty was the cause of the act. He was a South Carolinian. His wife is a cousin of H. n. Jefferson Davis and a lady of high social position.

Wouldn't it be a pretty mess of fish if the Republicans were to nominate little Alex Stephens for Vice-President with Grant for President? And it is by no means impossible. They are shrewd and mean enough to do it. Already they are hurrying for him in Congress, because Alex is a kind of unruly boy, and won't obey orders.

The enormous advance in the price of printing paper has caused an effort to obtain a remedy from Congress. The publishers at Chicago have made a strong appeal for the removal of the heavy duty on printing paper. It is a tax on education and its immediate removal is just and proper.

The editorial in the News and Courier on the "causes of crime in South Carolina," is excellent. The sentiments expressed against in temperance and the practice of fear, using concealed arms are held all high-toned.

A fatal affray occurred near Winsboro on Tuesday between two brothers by the name of Young and a Mr. Wm. Stephenson, in which the latter was killed.
